The "patriotic contributions" to the war fund are made for the most part, in kind, consisting of manufacured goods, produce of the soil, pictures of sainte, the paper money issued by various monetary institutions or their coupons, so that the treasury itself is not much the richer for them. Exactly the same I read in a letter from St. Fetersburg now ocfore me; the proference which the Russian at all imes entertains for specie increases in the sam inns entertains for specie increases in the same proportion as the paper money increases. For all mide with Asia paper meney is, of course, useless: liver becomes every day dearer, and, in spite of svery prohibition, disappears more and more from inculation. The public offices pay out little or no ilver, and it is expected that very shortly it will be made obligatory for a portion at least of the taxes to be paid in coin. The high price of sugar, which seems to be a matter of general complain everywhere, continues to rise, and the stocks in nand continue to diminish, without prospect of being replenished, and the prices of conveyance rom Kowne to the capital increase the already igh prices to an almost unattainable amount An ukase of November 30 exempts the Jews of An issas of Advember 30 exempts the Jews of Bessarabia from the appreaching conscription insidentally to the exemption pronounced in favor of the governments of Poltava, Tebernigov, Charkow, Essaterinoslav, Cherson, and Taurida, as the uka-s says, "on account of the great sasrifices and exertions which the present state of war has all ready imposed upon them." The hidden motive however, seems to be to relieve the different cominunities in these governments from official re-searches, seeing that in reality there are no more flebrows there to be had fit for service. Toe few hat lately were to be had have availed the f the recent law which exempts Jews who devot bemselves to agricultural pursuits from the con From another letter from St. l'etersburg, I learn that since the Emperor's return from Nicolaies avery noticeable change is described as being obervable in him, even to those not i timately in-reduced into the court circle. He was never articularly demonstrative person or very lively in his communications, nor has he over concealed his preference for peace. Of late it is remarked that ic has become more silent than formerly, and often ears on his countecance an expression of sadness hose who are intimate with his character describe his expression as by no means resulting from fain neartedtiess or despair, but rather like many of his expressions on his journey, and to persons in is confidence since his return, as the reliex of ons which the present war is causing his land t is not so much the less of men that is to be de rritory which are thus deprived for many years come of the hands to till and the arms to ussia is the country of raw material, and if she annot raise and consume or dispose of this, she ills into a state approaching financial starvation.

The Emperor's last journey has brought this reection very much home to his mind, and touched as he has often been to tears at the willingness of oth-sacrifice shown by his subjects, he has not been able to shut his eyes to the fact that the meanwill soon fail them, even if the willingness lasts The Russian army has had still more enermous esses than the reports that reach the West con-ess, and than the most during funcy imagines. For hese losses the Russians endeaver to console them elves with the reflection that the Haglish army. he lirst one, the real one, has been destroyed to that the Emperor is himself sincerely desirous once cannot be desied, any more than that his rether and his consort leave no opportunity of resuming to his mind the desirableness of his rother and his consort les

The latest Swedish papers contain many private communications from Finland, from which we carn the great losses to the country and the fear-ully high prices caused there by the war. The ittle fown of Wasa has suffered a loss of no less nan 125,000 silver roubles; in Abo all the neces saries of life are 50 per cent, dearer than usual, n Helsingfors matters are still worse. The latter lower is suffering from an excessive amount of pilitary quartaged on the inhabitanty, rents ha isen fearfully, and as soon as any dwelling nown to be vacant, it is snapped up at any private military authorities. The Invalide liusse contains the report of the letman of the Cossacks of the Black Sea, Majoreneral Philippson, on the expedition sent on the 221 October last against the Tchertchoneiffers, an independent tribe of the Caucasus, inhabiting the country to the south of the kuban, and which made continual incursions into the Russian territory. Acul-Yedentscukai, the principal village of these mountaineers, was attacked unexpectedly by a detachment of Cossacks, who had four pieces of samon and eight mortars, and was given up to the fishes. But when the conquerers were retiring, with some prisoners and three hundred head of cattle, they were constantly harassed by the anuntaineers; several times in fact, the Tcherke sembled in considerable numbers, attacked the tussians, and obliged them to cut their way hrough. In one of those attacks the chiefs of the natives, Hadji-llakei Hadj, is said to have been nortally wounded. The conflict was prolonged on these conditions for an entire day, and in the rening of the 23d October the Russians recrossed he Kuban. Three Lastern regions are from time to time poken of as "the sext of war." In one a disastrons drams has been just consider. Amid the dash heights of the Armenian mountains an hole strangle is now concluded. For nearly five neaths the defenders of Kars resisted the cunnon of a vasily superior force. Twice they repelled he easet of the enemy. We event of the war has tisplayed mere courses and stubborn fortitude; and has not called forth the interest and admistion of the world. But famine has done its other has nore called forth the interest and admitation of the will. But famine has done its acid, and brave men have yielded when honor and their country's rune were fully satisfied. Kars show a Russian p sition. The carthworks which air gullant country men constructed will now shelter determined fees, emulous of the resistance of schalopel, and anxious to preserve what they aust feel to be their only conquest. Gunnits now no lenger the advanced post of the Carr, his armies, though weakened by their long and divery biveuue, now hold a fertress and a district $1000 eet above the sea, in a country difficult to approach, and guarded by the long range of the Sophinfy-Dagh from the attempt of any but a resolution. These mountains look down on Experonum, which is now the frontier city of the Turks. There chich is now the fronter city of the Turks. There is probably little fear that it will be attacked at uch a season, should a relieving army have had me to concentr to itself behind the works which ere the capacial care of our gallant General W: nuss. But it is evident that we know too little of the armies in these parts to make any conclutions weighty. Nincteen days have clarged before he surrender of Kars has been fully confirmed; in at time much may have happened, and of Vely acha and his forces we know almost nothing. On the inhand Asiatic seat of war we are thus certain out of one thing—that the Tunks have lest an important post, and that another may be perhaps in league. iverse their own territory.
The third and most striking picture is that of tellness which has for three months over-pread to most gigantic battlefield of modern lines. acir labors are sust ended: preparations for comout or amasement escapy all, from the general to he private: the daily historian of the war an-ounces that he has little to tell. We will not now iscres the generalship of the communders, or enjure a campaign of our own times with Aushave who have gained laurels have a right to rest n them for a season. We will presume that in
